

Understanding your Child's Well Exam Visit

If your child is scheduled for a Well Child Exam today, depending on your insurance plan this visit may require co-pay, a deductible or a coinsurance.

Some insurance plans cover well exams at 100% and some require you pay a portion. Reston Pediatric Associates' billing office will submit the claim to your insurance company. If your insurance determines you owe a co-payment, deductible, or coinsurance you will receive a statement with the portion your insurance company has left you as patient responsibility.

The definition below describes what insurance companies define as a Well Child Exam and what is excluded.

Well Child Exam: An exam on a healthy child with no symptoms to look for hidden disease and give advice on healthy behavior. Getting the right preventive services at the right time can help your child stay healthy by preventing disease or by detecting a health problem at an early stage when it may be easier to treat.

Does Not Include: Medication refills, evaluation of new symptoms, or management of chronic problems.

Insurance Coverage: Covered by most insurance. However, if new medical issues are discussed or chronic problems are managed, there may be an office visit charge. Check your policy for frequency limitations. Copay, deductible and coinsurance may be applied.
